

FROBOZZ

Issue #30

June 28, 1986

ATTENTION

My Platt Road address will soon be no more. Most of you have been sending your mail, correctly, to my post office box. But a few of you have still been using the Platt address. Please use the address at the bottom of this page for all correspondence from now on. Thank you.

I'm going to be really busy next month as I move into my new house. The way things look now, I have to plan on doing some of the moving four weeks from now. So, this time the deadline will be five weeks hence, instead of the usual four. I hope none of you will grow bored with all this extra time on your hands. We'll be back on the four week schedule next issue.

By the way, it is a virtual certainty that I'll have to change my phone number when I move. Thus, you should all mail your orders to me this season. Since you have an extra week this time, this should be no problem, right?

Four people are signed up for what may be Frobozz's last game. They are: Drane, Gonsalves, Vaporis, and Jensen. Three more cutthroats are needed before we can begin.

What was that? "Frobozz's last game!!?" Well, maybe. As many of you know, I print this zine on my company's printer. I have a suspicion that my privileged access to the printer may be withdrawn when the printer is moved to our other building. I will do my best to retain my printer privileges, but there can be no guarantees. If I lose my privileged status, it would mean waiting an extra day to receive the printer output (thus, you would be getting the zine a day later), and I would not be able to proofread the copy without a delay of yet another day. Naturally, this does not sit well with me. If the worst happens, I may end up abandoning the company's printer altogether, opting instead to use my Macintosh. That would mean Frobozz would lose its current look, but at least it would come out on time. I would be interested in knowing which option you readers prefer. Do you want Frobozz to look like Frobozz, and have it come out a day or two later? Or would you rather Frobozz look more like an open-page The Razor's Edge, so that it can come out on the same schedule it does now?

Actually, I haven't really touched the heart of the problem, yet. While there is some doubt about how convenient it will be for me to use the company's printer, my main concern is about the company itself. It has not been doing well lately. So many people have been laid off, it seems as though they're dropping like flies. It hadn't really bothered me that much, though, until this week when a close friend of mine (with ten years experience) was one of the people to bite the dust. So, I'm in mourning right now, and these last two paragraphs were written while in a black funk. If the company collapses, or I desert the sinking ship, or I become another lay off victim, then Frobozz will probably fold. But it is premature to expect any of these events, so I wouldn't take my threats to fold Frobozz too seriously. Yet.

The following plug is repeated verbatim from last issue by special request: Russ Rusnak, 900 N. Rohlwing Rd. #333, Addison, IL 60101 is looking for players to participate in regular Diplomacy, Cosmic Diplomacy, and WWIIb. He plans to start the games in August. To those of you who have asked me to start another section of WWIIb: This is your golden opportunity. If you wait for me to start another WWIIb game, you'll be waiting forever. Do the sensible thing and drop Russ a line. For those unfamiliar with Cosmic Dip, Russ describes it as "a variant that has the basic rules of Diplomacy. However, every participant has a special power that allows him a certain advantage. Examples are the Terrorist that can mine provinces, the Chameleon whose Spring moves are hidden, the Clone that can split one unit into two, and an assortment of others."

Standby pool for regular Dip: Townsend, Fleming, Drane, Peters, Henry, Frueh, Hugh Christie, Gonsalves, Holley. For WWIIb: Frueh, Vaporis. Does anyone want to be added to or removed from either list?

FROBOZZ is published at four week intervals by Jeff Richmond, P.O. Box 3288, Ann Arbor, MI 48106; phone number 313-971-7793. Subscription rate is $3.50 for ten issues. Game openings available. Game fee is $4.00 plus a continuing subscription to Frobozz.

Bridge Challenge

Last issue, you were presented with three hands from a sectional tournament:

1. With both sides vulnerable, LHO deals and opens one notrump (showing 15-17 high card points). Partner overcalls two notrump (promising at least five cards in each minor), and RHO passes. Your hand is:

♠ K J 8 5 ♥ A K Q 8 7 5 4 ♦ 5 ♣ 2

When I held this hand, I thought this was a really tough problem. It is quite possible we are already too high, yet it is also possible that we could have a slam. For instance, if partner has:

♠ 3 2 ♥ 2 ♦ K Q J 10 9 ♣ Q J 10 9 8

we'd be lucky to scramble eight tricks, but if partner holds:

♠ — ♥ J 3 2 ♦ A J 10 9 8 ♣ K Q J 10 9

six hearts is nearly cold. Unfortunately, there is no way to find out without committing ourselves one way or the other. If we pass or bid three hearts, we will often miss a good game. And we can't look for slam without getting past the game level, thus risking getting too high. My feeling then, as now, is that it is too cowardly to stop below game, especially since we are vulnerable at IMP scoring. And looking for slam seems too aggressive, because it requires partner to hold a nearly perfect hand for it to be right. So, we should just bid a game, but which one? I believe that three notrump will nearly always make whenever four hearts does (the main exception being when partner is void in spades), and it will often make when four hearts does not. Thus, three notrump is the call I chose. For all you result merchants out there, partner's hand was actually:

♠ Q ♥ 6 2 ♦ A J 10 7 4 ♣ Q J 10 9 7

The opening lead was a spade, which the notrump opener won. He then cashed the two top clubs. Since hearts were not 4-0, my partner had no trouble winning the last ten tricks. We scored +430. At the other table, my counterpart bid four hearts after hearing the same auction. My teammate led a trump. Declarer won and led a spade, but this was captured by the ace. Another trump was played to stop the impending spade ruff. The declarer was thus held to ten tricks, so my teammates scored -420. A push.

2. You are the dealer and open one spade, vulnerable against not. Partner responds one notrump, and you rebid two diamonds. Partner says three spades (showing 10-12 points and exactly three spades). You cuebid four diamonds. Partner cues four hearts. You mark time with four spades, and partner produces a five club cuebid. It's your turn, holding:

♠ A K 8 7 6 ♥ 9 2 ♦ A K 9 7 6 ♣ 7

I've decided this is a bad problem. Trying for slam is too greedy when you know that partner is limited to three spades and twelve points. Partner has to hold a super hand just to give slam a reasonable chance. So, I have complete sympathy for those who complain about the four diamond cuebid and now wish they were back in four spades. So why did I bid four diamonds? My excuse is that at the table, this hand seemed better to me than it really is. And my partner and I play that the four spade bid on this particular sequence shows only a mild slam try. Partner is expected to pass without a slam-oriented maximum. Thus, my auction, while too aggressive, isn't really awful (just bad). Anyway, when I heard the five club cuebid, I decided to blast all the way to six spades (maybe that's really awful). The six spade bid ended the auction, and LHO led a club. Dummy hit with the "perfecto" I needed:

♠ Q 5 3 ♥ A Q 7 ♦ 10 4 3 2 ♣ A 6 4

This is a pretty good contract. There are three potential losers, one each in spades, hearts, and diamonds. But a 3-2 trump split would take care of the spade loser, a successful finesse would prevent a heart loser, and a favorable diamond position would avoid a loser there. Since only two out of three pieces of luck are needed, the chance of success is greater than 50%, making the slam a good bet. On this particular day, the heart king was onside, but LHO also held three diamonds and the stiff deuce of spades. Down one, losing a bundle of IMPs, as the opponents at the other table stopped at the five level. Now we come to what the point of the hand was supposed to be. As long as I was going to bid slam anyway, I should have tried six diamonds. Partner can always correct to spades without adequate diamond support. On this hand, I would've come out smelling like a rose, had I thought of that bid. Of course, had I been thinking clearly, I'd have stopped at four spades and come out smelling average.

♠ K 10 5 ♥ K 5 4 ♦ Q J 2 ♣ A 10 6 5

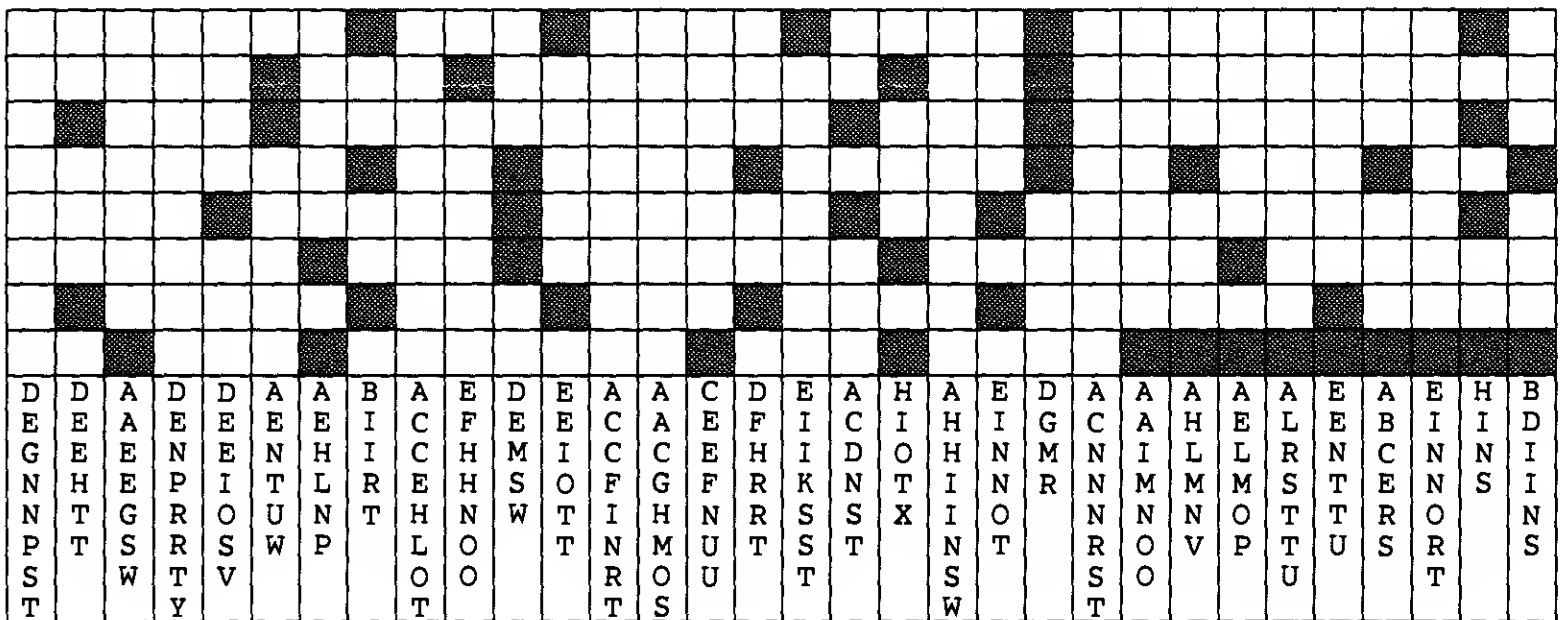

♠ Q 8 6 3
 ♥ J 10 2
 ♦ 8 7
 ♣ K Q 4 3

♠ J 2
 ♥ Q 9 8 7
 ♦ 10 9 6 5 3

♠ A 9 7 4
 ♥ A 6 3
 ♦ A K 4
 ♣ J 8 2

As you can see, a heart or club lead gives away a trick and the contract. Against a diamond or the actual spade lead, declarer has a much tougher time. Unfortunately, despite the good start, our subsequent defense was soft, allowing declarer to make a contract that we could have set. Now that I think about it, this makes an interesting double-dummy hand. Let's say that West leads the diamond queen against four spades. Assuming no one makes a mistake, who will prevail, declarer or the defense? Deadline for answers, which you must prove, is August 1, 1986.

Move the letters shown below into the boxes directly above the columns in which the letters appear. If done correctly, a quotation will be spelled out. Deadline for answers is August 1, 1986. If you need help getting started, send me an SASE and a copy of the puzzle. Mark which boxes you want me to fill in for you, and I will duly return the filled-in puzzle. I will also deduct one point from your score for each three boxes I fill in.

Bridge Masters

Four of you attempted the bidding problems with pretty good success. The scores were: Jim Lawniczak - 50, Matt Chen - 48, Marc Peters - 47, Steve Langley - 47. So the combined standings are:

1. Jim Lawniczak - 100 points
2. Matt Chen - 93 points
3. Steve Langley - 82 points
4. Marc Peters - 47 points

Don't forget to solve this month's double-dummy problem on page 3!

PRESS — England to France: I question whether anything here is done at the tactical rather than the strategic level. Frankly, I think my hands-off-Edinburgh policy has been most productive.

France to Germany and Russia: It was great meeting you both at Marycon. It's even more amazing that the three of us were in the four-way draw. Both of you are good players and I hope to meet you again in a game where we can work together.

France to Russia: It sure was fun stealing London from you in F01 — of course you have forgotten all about that and look forward to the day you play Austria to my Italy.

Mark Frueh to Fred Townsend: Hey, you should attend Madcon if you get the time. If you need information, call or write me. 314-832-1791. I won't be going this time. I'm off to Pudgecon — Wichita, KS to meet the Langleys and play a vicious game of Titan with Martin and Terry Tallman. Either one you're welcome to come.

The Bikers

The driver of a big semi-rig stopped at a truck stop for supper. He ordered a hamburger, french fries, cheesecake, and coffee. Just as his food was placed in front of him, half a dozen rough looking motorcycle riders stormed into the place. They immediately began to harass him. They grabbed his hamburger and fries and divided them. One drank his coffee and another took his cheesecake. They jeered him and called him a wimp and a coward and several less-printable names.

The trucker never said a word. He got up quickly, paid his bill, and hurried out into the night. After he had driven away, one of the motorcycle gang shouted at the manager of the truck stop, "He sure wasn't much of a man, was he?"

"No, he wasn't," the manager replied. "And he wasn't much of a driver, either. He just ran over six motorcycles as he backed his rig out of the parking lot."

Endgame Statements

Doug Baker (Russia): The determining factor in this game for me was Russia's alliance with Turkey. Mark Harris was a very faithful ally. However, his occasional NMRs virtually put a win into my lap. We started off by demolishing Austria with Italy's help. Pat Jensen took over as Austria and made strenuous efforts to avert the inevitable. He must have talked Robert Wood into breaking the Russian-German alliance because a vigorous German stab succeeded in taking WAR. In the meantime however, I had succeeded in wresting control of Scandinavia from England, and my fleets fell upon DEN, KIE, and BER from the north, whereupon Germany beat a hasty retreat from WAR. Joel Peacher in England was hard pressed by France and Germany, so he agreed to give up his planned attack on me and to cooperate with Russia against Germany in return for a guarantee of survival. About this time Robert NMRed out and Germany quickly collapsed. Lu Henry assuming that position with three units had no chance. By this time (1906) everyone had pretty much stopped negotiating, at least with me.

Mark attacked me once in Rumania, then wrote quickly saying it was just a ploy to confuse the others and offered me BUL in exchange. He followed through on his promise, too, so I guess he was on the up and up. When he NMRed again I moved to attack Turkey, figuring that I had no reason to be loyal to a replacement player. But Mark got back in the game and convinced me that he still wanted to work together. By that time, I could see a win on the horizon. I never heard from some of the replacement players. When Howard Christie took over Turkey, I offered to leave him alone if he left me alone. By that time, though, there was no stopping Russia no matter what anyone did. He chose to attack in an effort to stop me. Jim Petersen came in late in the game and made a valiant effort to save France but in vain. He deserved better than to get wiped out on the last turn of the game.

In summary, I would say that I won because of a faithful ally and because of numerous drops and NMRs rather than because of brilliant strategy or tactics.

Special thanks to you, Jeff, for the pleasure of the game. You do a great job with the zine and you seem to be a fine GM.

Pat Jensen (standby Austria): When I appeared in this game, it was obvious I was heading out quickly. Fortunately, I was able to convince at least one of the four powers around me (I, R, T & G) not to attack me. This allowed me to last my long five years.

The obvious best play award should go to Doug for winning. But he never had a serious threat when he tried to win. Every country fell apart except for Joel Peacher. In a game where dropping out was fashionable (almost two players from every country), he stayed in. If anyone is looking for someone who sticks through thick and thin, he's it. Congratulations Joel and Doug.

Final thanks to Jeff Richmond for giving me such a great position. It was fun but frustrating. No GMing mistakes can remember. Another well run game from you. Thanks.

PRESS — Heavy-water Clipper Chernobyl to London: We're coming after you (we're sure you're melting in your boots)! We shall avenge the demise of the Ice Cutter Minsk!

Aboard the Chernobyl: This month's lunch special is tuna melt-down sandwich and salad with Three Mile Island dressing. We know this is the same as last month's special, but hey, this is Russia!

Austria to England: And I thought I was tough! Congratulations on spilling so much blood!

Austria to Russia: Speaking of blood, do I have a hole in my back?

The Chernobyl to Vienna: Now, please don't over-"react" to my passing through Constantinople.

Moscow to Paris: Parlez-vous po-Polsky?

Austria to France: Once more into the breach, as it were.

Fleet Captain Mid-Atlantic Ocean to Vienna: Are you sure that the North Africans will be interested in our Danish beer? My brother in Denmark is guaranteed sales in Sweden, but I'm not convinced that North Africa is a good market.
